

Professor Dr. Panagiotis J. Stamatis: Brief CV

Dr. Panagiotis J. Stamatis is a Full Professor of Communication Pedagogy at the Department of Sciences of Preschool Education and Educational Design, Faculty of Humanities, University of the Aegean, Greece. His educational career has begun on 1989 in Primary Education as a public Elementary School Teacher for 15 years. Then, he was appointed as a public Elementary School Head teacher for 4 years; and finally as a (public and private) Prefectural Primary Education Supervisor and Elementary School Teachers' Counselor for 2 years in total. In parallel to the mentioned job positions, he was continuing his studies for 17 years in Preschool and Elementary School Education were occurred at the degrees of Bachelor and PGDE, before his PhD dissertation had been completed. His PhD is focused on Communication Pedagogy (or Educational Communication) putting emphasis on teaching Nonverbal Communication issues. After that, his academic carrier was started.

Since 2004, he was appointed as External Co-ordinator/Tutor at the rank of Lecturer in the Department of Sciences of Preschool Education and Educational Design, University of the Aegean located at Rhodes island, Greece. After holding the rank of Lecturer for 4 years, then the rank of Assistant Professor for 4 years and then the rank of Associate Professor for 4 years, also at the same Department, he is holding today the position of Full Professor in Communication Pedagogy. His research interest focuses on Communication Pedagogy and Educational Communication issues related mainly to the ages of Preschool and Early Elementary School Education in regard to school and family environment interactions and communicative behavior including verbal, nonverbal and bullying behavior.

Recently, he had at least a "triple role" in the Department of Sciences of Preschool Education and Educational Design as he was among other duties the Head/Chair of this Department; the Director of Experimental Psychology, Psychometric Research and Clinical Applications Laboratory; and the Vice Director of Master's Program (MA) "Models of Educational Planning and Development" at the University of the Aegean. Participation in international conferences, teaching activities in European Universities, research, paper, chapter and book publications, peer reviewing and many international collaborations are of the most favorite among his current academic activities.